

The Louisiana School Based Health Alliance (LASBHA) is part of a national movement to make healthcare more accessible to children and adolescents by placing it where they go every day - school. In this way, we promote the health and academic success of students and economic development of communities by increasing access to the quality healthcare provided by school health centers. LASBHA pursues this mission by advocating public policies that support school-based health centers. We build support among decision makers at the national, state and local levels for sustaining existing sites and expansion of the SBHC model. We educate students, parents and community leaders to the mission of school-based health centers and use their input to create more responsive facilities. And we bring technical expertise to new and established centers to maximize their impact.
